

N.A.R.D. Journal

Devoted to the Interests of the Retail Drug Trade

Vol. XXIX

CHICAGO, MARCH 18, 1920

24

Vancouver Physicians Resent Criticism

While the members of the medical and pharmaceutical professions of this country are seriously considering the question as to whether or not they should avail themselves of the privilege granted in the Volstead law to prescribe and dispense alcoholic liquors for medicinal purposes, it is interesting to note the action of the Vancouver Medical Association, whose members, evidently resenting the criticism heaped upon them for prescribing intoxicating liquors, adopted the following resolution:

"First, we desire to go on record as utterly repudiating any responsibility for the enforcement of the act and to deny that, as a profession, we are law-breakers.

"Secondly, there is at present a large public demand for liquor; whether for medicinal or other purposes, the medicinal prescription is the only method whereby liquor can be obtained and this has led to undue pressure on physicians and has become an intolerable nuisance to the medical profession.

"Thirdly, if the demand for liquor is to be met, we most respectfully suggest to the provincial government that the medical profession be entirely relieved of the responsibility of dispensing liquor by the provision of other means whereby the same may be obtained."

The pharmacists of this country fully appreciate the position in which the medical men of Vancouver find themselves and sympathize with them in their predicament.

In the consideration of this question the position of the average pharmacist throughout this land is not an enviable one, for while the revenue and prohibition enforcement officials are in many instances urging the druggists to qualify and dispense intoxicating liquors under the conditions laid down in the Volstead law, these selfsame officials have in many respects failed to provide the necessary protection for those who did honestly and conscientiously endeavor to do so. Consequently, a large majority of the druggists of this country have refused to handle the liquor business at all and those who have undertaken it are evidently in serious doubt as to whether or not they will some day be called upon to assume full responsibility for all infractions of the law, whether due to their own negligence or to the cupidity of others. This is an intolerable condition and cannot be tolerated much longer and we believe that if some of those charged with the enforcement of the prohibition law would devote less time to newspaper interviews and the circulation of inflammatory statements and buckle down to the real work assigned to them, the situation would quickly be cleared up and those entitled to the knowledge would know just where they stand.

Druggists Not Profiteering

With Fair Price Commissions galore and the Federal Department of Justice active in investigating the many charges of profiteering being hurled against dealers in all lines of business, the retail druggists of the country should familiarize themselves with the actual conditions as related to the drug trade and thereby be in position to refute any charge of profiteering made against it and also to convince the members of Fair Price Commissions that the drug trade needs no regulation at their hands.

The first grand ball under the auspices of the Los Angeles Branch of the American Registered Pharmacists, at the California Temple of Arts, proved to be one of the social events in local drug circles.

J. L. Barbonell will open a drug store at Twenty-fourth street and Central avenue.

A municipal drug clinic has been opened in the Temple Block under the direction of the city and Federal government. Dr. John W. Nevius has been chosen head of the clinic.

New drug stores will be opened by A. Schleyen of the Court House Pharmacy, at Normandie avenue and Hollywood Boulevard and the Kress Wise Drug Company at Cahuenga and Hollywood Boulevards, Los Angeles.

F. H. Roberts, J. N. Kirkland, H. A. Dutton, A. J. Gardner and J. J. Freeman, well-known Los Angeles druggists, have formed a corporation to be known as the Cel-Pho Manufacturing Company, organized to exploit the sale of a new soft drink called "Cel-Pho". Stock is to be sold and operations begun as soon as the necessary permit is received from the state.

George F. Meiser has purchased the Frank W. Johnson drug store, Arlington and Washington streets.

H. J. Wrede succeeds L. F. Bass, as proprietor of the pharmacy at Vermont and Washington streets.

J. E. Morgenson has become junior partner in the Brynlsen Drug Company.

Portland Pickings

J. M. Risen, the genial proprietor of Risen's Pharmacy, was confined to his home during the latter part of February with a serious attack of influenza. During his absence the interests of the store were ably cared for by Dr. Joe DeSantis.

S. Oishi and Y. Chiba, who operate a chain of five drug stores under the firm name of Main Drug Company, Seattle, have bought the Oregon Drug Company, Portland, from H. R. Komoda, and will conduct the latter under the old name. Mr. Komoda has already sailed for his native country, Japan, where he expects to engage in the brokerage business.

F. N. Maus, who for a number of months past has been connected with the crude drug department of the Woodward Clark Drug Company, has bought the Harrison Street Pharmacy from J. H. Murphy and has changed the firm name to that of Maus Drug Store. Mr. Maus is a Kalamazoo, Michigan, man and has the distinction of having conducted, for more than twenty years, the only all night drug store in Kalamazoo. Mr. Murphy, the former owner, has decided to retire from the drug business and devote his attention to the real estate business.

The Portland Retail Druggists Association recently inaugurated a bulletin service for the benefit of its paid-up members. The bulletins will be issued monthly and will deal with subjects of immediate interest. An analysis of general business conditions among local druggists and a study of current prices at which commodities are being retailed are being made with the hope that through the data thus gained a greater uniformity of pricing can be reached. The Portland Association is making a special effort to keep abreast of the many vexing problems which confront the druggist daily and hopes in the immediate future to be in a position to solve some of the perplexities peculiar to the druggist. Ross M. Plummer, 260 Third Street, has been re-elected secretary.

Claude W. Kemp of Multnomah, Oregon, has opened a real estate office in connection with his drug store, thereby enabling him to make profitable outings.

Dr. Julius Zell, manager of the Apslund Drug Company, expects to sail for Europe on April 1st, provided he can secure his passport by that time. The Doctor intends to spend considerable time visiting the friends of his youth before returning to the States. Upon his return he will be accompanied by two of his brothers who will make their home in this country.

George F. Adams, owner of the Adams Drug Store at Southerlin, Oregon, died from influenza-pneumonia on February 7. Mr. Adams was one of the best known citizens of Douglas County, having lived there many years. He is survived by his widow and three children.

H. F. Brandon has sold his east side drug store to W. T. Hoffmire, former owner of the Carmelita Apartments. Mr. Hoffmire's son, Ray, who previously was with the Meyer Brothers Drug Co., Portland, will have charge of the business. Mr. Brandon expects to devote his time during the summer to hunting and fishing. Incidentally, he will lend his aid to the entertainment of the Shriners when they come to Portland in June. Mr. Brandon is well known among the trade throughout the state having served as president of the Oregon State Pharmaceutical Association during the past year.

Edgar A. Stipe, former president of the Portland Retail Druggists Association, has been elected chairman of the druggists' bureau of the Greater Portland Association.

Mr. A. P. Pendleton

Mr. A. P. Pendleton, one of the pioneer salesmen for Solon Palmer, died at his home 428 East Forty-sixth street, Chicago, March 9th, after a long illness.

Mr. Pendleton was with Solon Palmer for over forty years and in the early days sold Palmer's perfumes in many sections of the United States, but for a number of years his entire time was devoted to Chicago territory. He was the highest type of salesman and had numerous friends in the drug trade.

He was Past Commander of the Chevalier Bayard Commandery which officiated at his funeral. Burial was at Oakwood Cemetery.